The newest collection of Karito Kids—the Travel Charmers—are five smaller, softer versions of the originals. Each doll represents the country she has “visited” in her travels. Children are invited to donate a portion of their doll’s retail cost to a charitable cause. “Our new line of Travel Charmers not only encourages charitable giving but also increases a child’s understanding of different countries around the world and encourages them to have an appreciation of other cultures,” says Laura Rangel, KidsGive president. Italian Gia (from left) loves fashion and travels to Paris; American Zoe travels to Montreal, Canada; Kenyan Lulu goes to Madagascar; Mexican Pita takes on Brazil during carnival season; and Chinese Wan Ling takes a trip to Japan.
