

From Dipika Mirpuri,
Your Guide to Toys.

Sunday October 21, 2007

Help Needy Children with Karito Kids Dolls

Do a good deed by buying a beautiful doll. Yes, it's that simple. The Karito Kids dolls are 21" tall culturally diverse dolls which encourage the spirit of giving.

Every time you buy a Karito Kids doll, you can arrange for a donation to be made to a project which helps needy kids in other countries. KidsGive, the parent foundation of Karito Kids dolls, works in association with PLAN, a charitable organization which helps kids get clean water, food, a home and an education.

The Karito Kids dolls consist of 5 dolls including Wan Ling from China, Lulu from Kenya, Zoe from New York, Gia from Italy and Pita from Mexico. Each of these dolls has a personality of her own, and excels in different walks of life. The dolls are well crafted, made of vinyl and fabric, and have well tailored clothes and accessories. Each doll also comes along with a story of her own in a hard cover book. The doll and the book together retail for about $99.99. Although this may seem like too much to pay for a doll, if you consider the fact that you are making a donation which can help to better a child's life, it's a small price indeed.

Sunday October 21, 2007